VOCABULARY

NOTES

1. Sochira ni kamibukuro o wasuremashita.

You use sochira to mean “there(where you are)” when speaking over the telephone to a person with whom you are not particularly close. The particle ni as used in this sentence indicates the location where Mr.Mills left his bag.

2. Donna fukuro deshō ka.

A sentence ending with desu ka is a straightforward question, while one ending with deshō ka is less direct and softer-sounding.

3. reji no atari

Atari, “in the general area” is a vague way of indicating a location when you do not remember it exactly. Its meaning is similar to that of chikaku, which you learned in Book 1, but chikaku, literally meaning “vicinity,” emphasizes that the location in question is nearby.

4. Kono chokorēto, kirei de omoshiroi pakkēji desu ne.

Here the salesperson has omitted the topic marker wa after chokorēto. Often in everyday speech you leave out wa and go straight into your comment about the topic.

GRAMMAR & PATTERN PRACTICE

I Connecting Related Sentences

The particle de after a noun can serve as a conjunction equivalent in meaning to the -te form. You use it to connect a sentence ending in desu to another, related sentence. You can connect two sentences in this way even when they have different subjects or topics, as in:

Miruzu-san wa Kanada-jin de, Katō-san wa Nihon-jin desu.
or: (Wasuremono wa) shiroi kamibukuro de, naka ni chokorēto ga haitte imasu.

1 Construct sentences as in the example.

Ex) Ana-san wa Suisu-jin desu. (Ana-san wa) Shibuya ni sunde imasu.

Ana-san wa Suisu-jin de, Shibuya ni sunde imasu.

- 1) Satō-san wa bengoshi desu. (Satō-san wa) Miruzu-san no tomodachi desu.
 - 2) Kore wa ichiban ōkii saizu desu. (Kore wa) ichiban takai desu.
 - 3) Ana-san wa Suisu-jin desu. Miruzu-san wa Kanada-jin desu.
 - 4) Kochira wa Chūgoku no o-kashi desu. Sochira wa Nihon no o-kashi desu.

wasuremono

Ana

The -te (or -de) form of an adjective, too, can act as a conjunction. For -i adjectives, you get the -te form by dropping the final i from the modifying form and adding kute, e.g.:

shiroi	shirokute
white	white and ...

For -na adjectives, you drop na from the modifying form and add de.

benrina	benri de
convenient	convenient and ...

(to be continued to next page)

Examples:

Kono kamibukuro wa shirokute ōkii desu.
Chikatetsu wa benri de yasui desu.

You connect two or more adjectives with the -te form when they are both/all either positive in meaning or negative. When you want to connect a positive adjective with a negative one, as in the following example, you have to use the particle ga.

Kono kēki wa oishii desu ga, takai desu.

2 Complete the sentences as in the example.

Ex) karui, usui Kono kētai wa karukute usui desu.

- | | |
|-----------------------------|---------------|
| 1) atarashii, kirei | Kono kētai wa |
| 2) benri, yasui | Kono kētai wa |
| 3) kirei, ninki ga arimasen | Kono kētai wa |

II Describing Ongoing Actions or States in Effect

The -te imasu form of a verb indicates an ongoing action, e.g.,

Mizu o nonde imasu.

Or a state that is in effect, e.g.,

Kōto o kite imasu.

(omission)

Nekutai o shite imasu.
Bōshi o kabutte imasu.
Kuroi kutsu o haite imasu.
Kasa to shimbun o motte imasu.

Tatte imasu. Suwatte imasu. Elebētā ni notte imasu.

VOCABULARY

(P 37)

The highly frequent verbs that well exemplify the “state in effect” meaning of -te imasu are hairimasu, “to go inside,” and tsukimasu, “to attach to,” “to come with.”

Gurasu ni wain ga haitte imasu. Baggu ni hana ga tsuite imasu.

Describe the pictures below by using the appropriate verb.

- 1) Hako ni
- 2) Kinko ni
- 3) Kyabinetto ni
- 4) Kaban ni
- 5) Sūtsu-kēsu ni

(P 38)

III “Going somewhere to Do something”

You use the -masu stem of a verb, followed by ni ikimasu, ni kimasu, or ni kaerimasu, to express the idea of “coming,” “going,” or “returning” to do something.

Imakara tori ni ikimasu.

Note that although the verb in this sentence is ikimasu, “to go,” in natural English you usually say “come” if you are imagining yourself to be where the other person is.

1 Changing the sentences as in the example.

Ex) Hiru-gohan o tabemasu. Hiru-gohan o tabe ni ikimasu.

- 1) Eiga o mimasu
- 2) Bīru o nomimasu
- 3) O-bentō o kaimasu

2 Read the following sentences aloud while considering their meanings, and repeat them until you have memorized them.

- 1) Nanika tabe ni ikimasen ka.
 - 2) Kondo uchi ni asobi ni kite kudasai.
 - 3) Yūbinkyoku ni kitte o kai ni ikimasu.
